Please complete the following worksheet. You may want to review the form before completing it and you do not have to complete every section. Feel free to use this document as a brainstorming tool and create your own options. Studies have shown that conflict between parents is the most significant cause of adjustment difficulties for children of divorcing families. Therefore, the parenting plan is the most important part of your divorce, and the chance for each parent to be their better self.

Date: _____ Parent(s) Completing: _____

Co-parenting goals:

This parenting plan applies to the following children:

Child's Name	Age

MOVING: It is required by law that the following provision be included in your judgment:

“Neither parent shall move to a residence more than 60 miles further distant from the other parent without giving the other parent reasonable notice of the change of residence and providing a copy of such notice to the court. However, a parent may ask the court for an order for good cause suspending the notice requirement pursuant to ORS 107.159.”

While the statute provides for a 60 mile distance, you may select a different distance to include in your judgment. You may also select a specific number of days notice that is required. If you want a shorter distance, a specific number of days notice, have concerns about either parent moving, or know already that you or your spouse will be moving, include that information here:

PARENTING PLAN PROVISIONS

You will need to set out schedules for:

- a. The regular daily/weekly schedule for the school year;
- b. The summer;
- c. Vacations; and
- d. For holidays.

See the following discussions for more information on developing these schedules.

SCHOOL YEAR PARENTING PLAN SCHEDULE: Where will the children be each day? From what time to what time? With which parent?

Some families use a ‘traditional divorce’ model of children being with one parent every other weekend and perhaps an evening during the week or every other week, and with the other parent the rest of the time. Some families alternate weeks (generally only older children). Some use a two-week plan of 1-3 nights one week and 3-5 nights the next. Parents with young children may have a plan where both parents see the children every day.

Be creative based on your children’s school schedule, your work schedule, regularly scheduled activities, etc. Consider what both parents do best and what activities you each regularly participate in with your children. Although you, as parents, know your children better than anyone else, keep in mind that recent research has shown that it is beneficial to children to have the greatest amount of access to both parents, with the least amount of transition. Your task is to find the balance that works best for your newly configured family. And, because children’s needs change as they grow and develop, it is acceptable – and in the case of younger children, highly desirable – to revisit the parenting plan every two or three years, as needed. If you need assistance, we have a parenting expert available.

Child support is adjusted according to how much time each parent has with the children. Please do not let this sway your rationale for choosing any particular schedule to meet your children’s needs. Choose what works best for your children. Then address the financial issue, if need be.

Feel free to use the following table and/or the “Description” area below to create your own plan.

SUMMER SCHEDULE Where will your children be during the summer? Often during the summer, the children are with one parent or the other for week long periods that either run consecutively, or are divided by time with the other parent. Schedules usually consider summer school, camps, time with relatives, whether one parent lives out of state, a parent's work schedule and vacation allowance, etc. If one parent is having the children for most of the summer or a large block of time (1-2 weeks for a young child, 4-10 weeks for an older child), you may want to plan in a visit with the other parent. Sometimes, families will choose to continue the school year plan through the summer.

HOLIDAY PARENTING PLAN SCHEDULE: When creating a holiday plan, you might want to consider if you and your children would prefer to have a plan that is the same every year – establishing a tradition of sorts, or if you want to alternate holidays, or some combination of the two. The holidays listed are only examples. They all do not need to be included in a plan, or you may want to include different days. Consider your family traditions. How about extended family? Are your children used to spending Thanksgiving with grandparents?

Mother Father picks up the children at the end of the parenting time periods.

Each parent provides transportation to his/her own home to the other parent's home.

The parents will cooperate and agree upon transporting the children during parenting time.

Other:

SCHOOL / DAYCARE: Include a provision stating what school the child will attend.

Child	School

Generally, changes to this schooling or daycare arrangement will be made by parental agreement. However, you may choose to designate either Mother or Father to make this decision.

Each parent usually assumes the responsibility to be in contact with the appropriate sources of information regarding a child's school, sports, and extracurricular activities when the child is in that parent's care. Information concerning a child's schooling and/or extracurricular activities, should be provided to the other parent in a timely manner by the parent that receives it. This will include report cards, progress reports, homework, information concerning school pictures, school programs in which the children participate, schedules and schedule changes, name and phone number of the activity leader if available, and parent related activities (parent-teacher conferences, back to school night, etc.)

Each parent typically may visit with a children at school, attend the children's school activities (such as open house or sports activities), and have full access to school teachers and administrators for complete information about the children in school.

If the above described typical practices do not fit your circumstances, please describe your alternative arrangement:

MORE ABOUT EXTRACURRICULAR ACTIVITIES: Generally, both parents may attend any activity in which your children participates. Each parent is usually free to schedule any activity that occurs exclusively during their own time with the children. However, each parent should be respectful of the time of the other parent. This means that you should consult with your co-parent before scheduling an activity that occurs during that parent's time. To do otherwise may create needless conflict between co-parents and, more importantly, set your children up for disappointment. Obviously there will be times when even the best laid plans do not work out and the children will have to miss a game, performance, or social function. However, those disappointments should not arise because of a failure to communicate or a conflict between the co-parents.

Please describe any specific provisions for scheduling and attending extracurricular activities:

USE OF AN AUTOMOBILE

- The parents will consult regarding driving decisions, driving lessons and insurance. If the parents are unable to reach an agreement, they will address the issue with a mediator Mother will make the decision . Father will make the decision.
- No automobile provision.

HEALTH CARE FOR YOUR CHILDREN

It is required by law that a provision is included in your judgment requiring each parent to immediately notify the other party of any emergency circumstances or substantial changes in the health or safety of a child.

Your child's medical and dental care is important and each parent is encouraged to work with the other to make certain that the health care needs of the children are met. As required by Oregon law, each parent shall also have full access to medical, dental, and psychological records and care providers, as well as access to any government records concerning the children. Each parent should inform the other parent in a timely manner of medical and dental appointments scheduled for the children and both parents may attend any medical appointments that the child might have. Since it is typical, because of work demands, for only one parent to attend routine medical appointments, the parent who accompanies the child should be prepared to discuss the results of the exam with the other parent. If there is a major health issue or emergency, both parents will probably want to attend the appointment/procedure.

An additional, and very difficult issue, arises when a child is having emotional and/or behavioral problems. Should that unfortunate event occur, both parents should be prepared to participate extensively in their child's treatment and both parents should expect that the treatment will be difficult. Most importantly, both parents should expect this process to test their co-parenting relationship. However, it is at this point that parenting together is critical for the well-being of your children.

- Describe those provisions regarding health care that differ from the generalities outlined above:

- The children shall be medically cared for by the following healthcare providers:

Child	Physician	Dentist

Changes to these designations will be made by Mother Father Both parents by agreement.

If a child is sick, do you want to:

- Each parent will care for child during his/her scheduled parenting time.
- Mother Father will care for the child, unless otherwise agreed upon by the parents.
- Other:

CHILDCARE (other than regular daycare) Choose the options that apply:

- Each parent shall be responsible for making their own childcare arrangements for the temporary alternate care of the children.
- If the parent with whom the children is in residence is going to be absent for a period of _____ hours, the other parent shall be given the right of first refusal to care for the child.
- Other:

- The following provision is made with respect to the children's post divorce religious upbringing:

- No religious upbringing provision.

OTHER RELATIONSHIPS

- If either of the parents should become incapacitated by reason of illness or misfortune, or if either of the parents should die, the remaining parent will ensure that the children shall continue to have contact with the extended family of the affected parent.

- Exceptions: _____

- Other: _____

- No relationship provision.

CHILDREN'S TOYS—BELONGINGS—CLOTHING

- The parents recognize that the children may have particular attachments to certain belongings and will respect the children's right to have such belongings transfer with them between parents.

- No toys/belongings provision.

COMMUNICATING WITH PROFESSIONALS: Choose the options that apply:

- The parents will meet jointly with physicians, educators, psychologists, law enforcement authorities, or other professionals as needed regarding child related problems. This provision does not preclude either parent from meeting separately with such professionals, but each will inform the other of such meetings in advance, whenever possible, and always as soon as possible.

- Other: _____

- No problem solving provision.

COLLABORATION / MEDIATION

If the parents cannot resolve a dispute under this agreement by separate discussion and negotiation, then as a condition precedent to seeking a court order of any kind, the parents will mediate their dispute with the assistance of a collaborative professional, mediator, or another having expertise in family and child custody issues agreed upon by the parties. This makes sense because the court will require parents to attempt mediation before allowing a hearing on any disputed matter.

Either parent may determine if collaboration or mediation is necessary in order to resolve conduct issues and such parent shall give written notice that he or she intends to invoke this clause. Both parents shall attend a meeting with the assisting professional(s) as soon as the assisting professional(s) as soon as an appointment is available.

Cost:

- The parent who first invokes the clause shall be initially responsible for any costs associated with the dispute resolution session pending agreement made by the parties or Court Order.
- The parties will bear this expense equally.
- The parties will bear this expense as follows: Mother _____ % Father _____ %.
- Other: _____
- No detailed Collaboration/Mediation provision.

COMMUNICATION: Check all that apply:

- The parents agree to meet in a calm, quiet, uninterrupted environment to discuss any child related problem

The parents will communicate with each other via:

- Telephone
- Email Communication book Other: _____
- No provision.
- Each parent shall have the unlimited right to correspond with the child(ren) and to telephone him/her during reasonable hours.
